My doctor plans to keep me on two more sessions of Pemetrexid, to occur March 3 and March 24. (I have tolerated chemotherapy very well. My EKGs have been good. I sleep excellently and have a good appetite.)

After [Redacted] review my information and list of supplements (following below), I am most eager to know [Redacted] recommendations on the following issues.

First, what, if any, recommendations do you have for change in protocol?

Also, on 2/1/2026, I ceased taking my CBD Oil (3100 Full Spectrum) 100 mg/day in anticipation of drug testing for the purposes of employment. I will also likely need to refrain from taking my Melatonin (300 mg/day) for the month of April, which is the duration for which this (temporary) job will last. Please comment.

Of note, as my oncologist's physician assistant was tasked with contacting me regarding my PET scan results due to his absence, she just kept saying, "Nothing lights up... nothing is lighting up!" - and with regard to the effusion said, "It's completely resolved. There is no sign that it was ever even there!" (emphasis mine, as she stated it rather flatly.) I am greatly eager for an honest interpretation of my results! (Although when I asked her if there was No Evidence of Disease, she concurred! And you can't get better than that!!)
